

Serious Fraud Office (Abolition and Transitional Provisions) Bill

Government Bill

As reported from the Law and Order
Committee

Commentary

Recommendation

The Law and Order Committee has examined the Serious Fraud Office (Abolition and Transitional Provisions) Bill and recommends by majority that it be passed with the amendments shown.

Introduction

This bill repeals the Serious Fraud Office Act 1990 and disestablishes the Serious Fraud Office (SFO). The functions of the Serious Fraud Office will be taken over by the Organised and Financial Crime Agency of New Zealand (OFCANZ), which will be hosted within the New Zealand Police.

This commentary covers the key amendments that we recommend to the bill. It does not cover minor or technical amendments.

The development of the new Organised and Financial Crime Agency of New Zealand represents a significant opportunity for those presently engaged in the investigation of serious and complex fraud. It also offers a new mechanism to increase the attention given to serious and complex fraud, while significantly challenging those engaged in organised crime, whether of an international or domestic nature.

Accordingly, this bill disestablishes the SFO so that its existing functions and powers can be reformed into a permanent Serious Fraud Taskforce within OFCANZ. This decision would provide an effective response to the changed environment and establish a more streamlined response to both fraud and organised crime. Combining the skills, abilities, tools, and resources of the two organisations to undertake the financial investigations required to more effectively combat organised crime and serious or complex fraud is a significant step forward.

The inclusion of current SFO staff and expertise as part of the Financial Crime Group within OFCANZ will add to the critical mass needed to develop appropriate training and career opportunities to build the Police's financial crime investigation capability generally. It is anticipated that this will lead to an improved ability to investigate commercial fraud wherever it occurs, and regardless of whether it meets the standard of "serious or complex".

This integration would also allow the greatest degree of flexibility and coordination in the investigation of serious or complex fraud, while ensuring that the investigation of serious or complex fraud is identified as an ongoing priority within the Police. OFCANZ's ability to combat serious or complex fraud would be substantially enhanced by the integration of the SFO.

Oversight

We note that additional judicial oversight would be introduced regarding the powers to demand the production of documents, attendance at investigations, and answers to questions. We think this is appropriate, since failing to provide for such oversight would amount to the conferral of unusual powers on the Police. Judicial oversight would be consistent with the Police's exercise of statutory powers in other criminal investigations.

Production orders

We recommend amending clause 21 to clarify that there would be a requirement for a person to state to the best of his or her knowledge the location of a document, if he or she did not have the document. In the bill as introduced it is not clear that the penalty for failing to comply with a production order would extend to this requirement.

Delay of proceedings

We recommend amending clause 33 to prevent a judicial review resulting in an interim order that would delay the progress of the investigation. This amendment would align the bill more closely with section 21 of the Serious Fraud Office Act and clause 95 of the Criminal Proceeds (Recovery) Bill. It would still be possible to apply for a judicial review, but interim orders would not prevent a person from being required to comply with a production or examination order.

Schedule

We recommend amending the Schedule so that the references in the Tax Administration Act 1994 to commissioners are clear. In the bill as introduced, the amendment to the Act refers to two commissioners and the drafting may cause confusion about whether the Inland Revenue Commissioner or the Police Commissioner is intended in each instance, since either would be possible in context.

Review

We were concerned that there was no mechanism in this legislation to review the changes to the Serious Fraud Office's investigation powers that would result from the passage of the bill. We understand that this bill includes transitional provisions, however, and were advised that the Search and Surveillance Bill, which is still to be introduced, is likely to include a review process to be undertaken five years after the enactment of the Search and Surveillance Bill. This review would examine the investigation powers under the new regime.

New Zealand National Party minority view

The National Party does not agree that it is desirable to host the Serious Fraud Office within the Police at the present time and will oppose the bill. This is for four reasons; timing; degradation of powers; current Police practice and capability; and process.

Timing

There are currently ongoing investigations by the SFO in respect of collapsed finance companies. It is estimated that 175,000 people have invested in these companies. National members believe it is the wrong time to be removing the independent capability of our most engaged serious fraud investigating agency.

Degradation of powers

The Director of the SFO has enjoyed powers to demand provision of documents, attendance at investigations, and answers to questions, since the inception of the office in 1990. This Bill removes these powers from the Director and requires the applications to be made before the court. The Police, the Law Commission, and those in support of the bill have stated that the removal of these powers is a relatively minor point. However National members believe their argument is insufficient to warrant change to the status quo.

Current Police practice and capability

Fraud investigation has not been seen as a priority in the Police for ten years. There are currently only three offices within the Police dealing with serious fraud. Police acknowledged that they have concentrated on crimes against the person as a priority due to the need to ration resources. National believes that hosting the SFO within the Police at a time when capability is low and the preference is for investigating other categories of crime is not the best option for the office. The Police have expressed a desire to have the capability of the SFO support the Organised and Financial Crime Agency (OFCANZ). However the expertise of the SFO can be seconded from a stand-alone agency just as other agencies currently support the Police by secondment.

Process

The committee heard that the decision was made to host the SFO within OFCANZ in September 2007. The announcement of this decision was made by press release. The SFO told the committee that they had been consulted two weeks prior to the public announcement. At the time of the announcement, the committee had been in the process of considering which agency should be the recovery body under the Criminal Proceeds (Recovery) Bill. National Party members of the committee believe that by making this announcement without requisite consultation, the Executive undermined the select committee process.

- (3) ~~Subsection (2) has effect despite any interim order made in the proceeding unless the High Court is satisfied that—~~

 - (b) ~~the applicant would suffer harm from the exercise or discharge of the power or duty; and~~
 - (c) ~~if the power or duty is exercised or discharged before a final decision is made in the proceeding, none of the remedies specified in subsection (4), or any combination of those remedies, could subsequently provide an adequate remedy for that harm.~~ 15
