 - (b) impose a sentence in substitution for the sentence imposed that may be warranted in law for that other offence (which must not be a sentence of greater severity).

- (2) Where the court exercises the power conferred by subsection (1), it may pass on the appellant, in substitution for the sentence passed on him by the Court Martial, such sentence as it thinks proper being a sentence warranted by the Armed Forces Discipline Act 1971 for the offence specified or involved in the substituted conviction, but not being a sentence of greater severity than that actually passed by the Court Martial.

9E Appeal against acquittal on account of insanity

- (1) A person who is acquitted by the Court Martial on account of his insanity shall have the same right of appeal against the finding of the Court Martial as he would if the finding had been a conviction.
- (2) If on any such appeal the finding of insanity is challenged by the appellant, and the court is of the opinion that the finding ought not to stand, and is satisfied that in the absence of such a finding the proper finding would have been that the appellant was guilty of an offence (whether that with which he was charged or any offence of which he could have been convicted at the trial), the court shall substitute for the acquittal a conviction for the offence. Thereupon the court shall have the same powers of sentencing or otherwise dealing with the appellant, and such other powers, as the Court Martial would have had if the substituted conviction had been recorded at the trial.
- (3) Except as provided in subsection (2), on any such appeal the court may—
 - (a) allow the appeal, and direct that the appellant be acquitted;
 - (b) dismiss the appeal;
 - (c) exercise any power, whether to direct a new trial or otherwise, that it could exercise if the appeal were an appeal against conviction.
- (4) No such appeal shall be allowed by reason only of the fact that the appellant ought to have been acquitted of the offence charged, if the court is of the opinion that, but for the insanity, the proper finding would have been that he was guilty of some other offence; but the court may direct that the other offence be substituted, in the record of the finding, for the offence charged.
- (5) Unless the court otherwise directs, the term of any sentence passed by it pursuant to subsection (2) shall begin to run from the time when it would have begun to run if passed on the date on which the finding appealed against was made.

- (3) If the court is satisfied that the evidence presented against the appellant is not sufficient to establish that the appellant caused the act or omission that forms the basis of the offence with which the appellant is charged, the court must quash the finding appealed against and direct that the appellant be discharged.
- (4) A discharge under subsection (3) does not amount to an acquittal.
- (5) In the case of an appeal against a finding relating to the appellant's fitness to stand trial, the court must (except where the appellant has been discharged under subsection (3)) consider the evidence of 2 health assessors (within the meaning of section 187(1) of the Armed Forces Discipline Act 1971), and confirm or quash the finding relating to the appellant's mental impairment.
- (6) If the court is satisfied that the appellant is mentally impaired, the court must—
 - (a) give the appellant and the respondent an opportunity to be heard and to present evidence as to whether the appellant is unfit to stand trial; and
 - (b) confirm or quash the finding relating to the appellant's fitness to stand trial.
- (7) If the result of the appeal is that the appellant is fit to stand trial, the court must give written notice of that fact to the Director of Military Prosecutions, who may then lay before the Registrar the charge sheet that, in accordance with section 101F(c) of the Armed Forces Discipline Act 1971, he or she has previously certified in respect of the appellant.

 - (a) substitute for the conviction an acquittal on account of his insanity; and
 - (b) quash the sentence passed in respect of the conviction.
