

LAND AND INCOME TAX AMENDMENT BILL (No. 2)

EXPLANATORY NOTE

THE purpose of this Bill is to make several miscellaneous amendments of the Land and Income Tax Act, 1923, and its amendments.

Clause 3: This clause extends the definition of the term "public authority" in section 2 of the principal Act so as to include the Christmas Island Phosphate Commission. This provision implements the agreement entered into in December, 1948, between the Governments of New Zealand and Australia for the joint purchase of the phosphate mining rights on Christmas Island, and the arrangement that the income of the Commission would be exempt from taxation in both countries.

Clause 4 provides for a special income tax rebate of £15 to persons who have attained the age of 65 years.

Clause 5: The effect of this clause is to exempt from income tax the income of any society or association formed for the purpose of advertising, beautifying, or developing any district with a view to attracting trade, tourists, visitors, or population, and not for private profit.

Clause 6: The purpose of this clause is to enable a husband who is separated from his wife to claim an exemption in respect of his wife to the same extent as if she were a dependent relative. At present a husband who is required to contribute to the support of his wife from whom he is separated is not entitled to any exemption in respect of his wife if her income exceeds £100, whereas if they are divorced he is entitled to an exemption of up to £50 in respect of the amount contributed to her support. This clause will apply the same provision in cases where they are separated but not actually divorced. In cases where the wife's income does not exceed £100, the husband will be entitled to the present exemption under section 4 of the Land and Income Tax Amendment Act, 1932-33, or the exemption provided by this clause, whichever is the greater.

Clause 7: This clause extends for a further year the operation of section 15 of the Land and Income Tax Amendment Act, 1945 (relating to the special depreciation allowance in respect of premises, plant, machinery, &c.). This extension will enable the depreciation allowance to be granted in the case of premises, plant, machinery, &c., acquired up to 31st March, 1952.

Clause 8: This clause authorizes the Commissioner to grant an initial depreciation allowance of 30 per cent in respect of the cost of the acquisition and installation of any farm equipment or the purchase or erection of accommodation for farm workers. Under subclause (4) the Commissioner may refuse to grant an allowance in respect of minor items of plant or in cases where the taxpayer has not kept sufficient records. Under subclause (5) the provision is to operate in respect of equipment and buildings acquired after the 31st March, 1950, and before the 1st April, 1953.

Clause 9: This clause provides for an allowance to taxpayers engaged in farming or agriculture of certain expenditure on development work on their land. The taxpayer is to be entitled to deduct: (a) Any expenditure incurred in the eradication or extermination of animal or vegetable pests on the land, the felling and clearing of bush and scrub, the destruction of weeds or plants, or the preparation of the land for farming or agriculture; (b) Any expenditure incurred in swamp drainage, construction of access, construction of dams, irrigation channels, &c., repair of flood or erosion damage, sinking of bores or wells, or erection and rabbit proofing of fences. The deduction under paragraph (b) is not to exceed £200 in the aggregate in any income year. Under subclause (3) where any land acquired is sold at a profit within a period of five years, the profit arising, to the extent that it can be said to result from expenditure which under this clause has been allowed as a special deduction, will be treated as assessable income in the year of sale, or, if the taxpayer so elects, the Commissioner may issue revised assessments for the earlier years, disallowing the development expenditure in respect of which deductions had been made in those years.

Clause 10: This clause re-enacts in a modified form the provisions of section 7 of the Land and Income Tax Amendment Act, 1935, which provided for the taxation of the profits of mutual associations. The purpose of that section was to make the profits derived by mutual associations from transactions entered into with their members assessable for income tax. That section is in similar terms to a section in a United Kingdom Act which has since been held by the Court to be ineffective to achieve its purpose. The section purports to make the profits of mutual associations taxable as if they had been derived from transactions with non-members, but the Court has decided that profits derived from similar transactions with non-members would not be taxable, and, therefore, the section has not achieved its purpose. The purpose of this clause is to correct the defect shown to exist in the present provision. The clause also alters the existing provision in two other ways. Under subsection (1) of that provision expenses are allowable as a deduction if they satisfy the conditions of either paragraph (a) or paragraph (b) of that subsection. The new provision makes it clear that amounts can be allowed under this subsection only if they comply with both conditions. The existing provision is further amended so as to apply to all mutual associations, whether incorporated or not.

Clause 11: The purpose of this clause is to provide that testamentary annuities charged on any property and paid out of income are to be allowed as a deduction in calculating the income derived from that property.

Clause 12: Section 89 of the principal Act provides that income derived by a person resident in New Zealand shall be exempt from income tax if it is derived from some other country within the British dominions and is chargeable with income tax in that country. The purpose of this clause is to extend those provisions to income derived from Western Samoa.

Clause 13: The purpose of this clause is to provide that certain transfers or settlements of income are to be disregarded for income tax purposes and that the transferor or settlor is to remain liable for income tax as if the transfer or settlement had not been made. Under subclause (1), where any person transfers any income to a relative or to a related company (as defined in subclause (6)) for any period that is less than seven years, or in the case of a transfer to a child of the transferor, for a period of less than seven years or a period that will expire during the minority of the child, without in either case transferring the ownership of the property producing the income, the transferor is to remain liable for tax on that income as if the transfer had not been made. Under subclause (2) similar provision is made with respect to settlements under which income is payable to a relative of the settlor or to a related company. Similar provision is made in subclauses (3) and (4) with respect to corresponding transactions by companies. Subclause (7) exempts from the provisions of this clause any transfer or settlement made before the 24th November, 1950, any marriage settlement, or any transfer or settlement made for full consideration or under which the income is payable during the life of the transferee or beneficiary.

Clause 14 makes provision for payment of income tax and social security charge by members of any emergency naval, military, or air force. The clause provides for the tax payable by those members to be deducted at the source. Under subclause (2) (a) a daily amount of income tax is to be deducted from the pay of each member calculated as if that rate of pay would continue for a full year, and under paragraph (b) a daily amount of social security charge is to be similarly deducted. Under subclause (3) the rate of tax is to be calculated as if the member had no other income and the member is to be entitled to a full personal exemption, a married man's exemption in respect of his wife, a married woman's exemption in respect of her husband, a dependant relative exemption, and a housekeeper's exemption, whichever of those exemptions is applicable in the circumstances of the case. Paragraph (d) of that subclause provides that the provisions limiting the amount by which tax may be reduced by reason of exemptions and as to the aggregation of the incomes of husband and wife are not to apply to any income taxed under the clause. Under subclause (4) any other income of the member is to be separately assessed as if he had received no pay as a member of the emergency force and had not received any special exemption in respect of that pay. Subclause (5) enables a member who claims that the system of taxation provided under this clause has resulted in his paying a greater amount of tax than would otherwise be payable to elect to have his pay assessed for income tax under the provisions of the principal Act.

Clause 15 provides that a mortgagee in possession of any mortgaged property is to be deemed the agent of the mortgagor in respect of any income derived by the mortgagee from that property and is to be liable for tax thereon accordingly.

Clause 16: At present the Commissioner is empowered to grant relief from payment of income tax on the ground of hardship, but no amount in excess of £25 may be remitted without the approval of the Minister of Finance. The purpose of this clause is to increase to £100 the amount which may be remitted without the necessity of obtaining the Minister's approval.

(b) Acquired or erected any building in order to provide accommodation for any person employed on the land by the taxpayer in connection with that business,— the Commissioner may in his discretion, subject to the provisions of this section, allow as a deduction in calculating the assessable income derived by that taxpayer from the business in the year in which the asset is acquired, installed, erected, or first used for the purposes of that business an initial depreciation allowance of thirty per cent of the cost price of that plant, machinery, equipment, or building.

(2) The initial depreciation allowance authorized by subsection one of this section shall be in addition to any deduction which may be allowed under paragraph (a) of subsection one of section eighty of the principal Act.

(3) Where the taxpayer elects to receive an initial depreciation allowance under this section in respect of any plant, machinery, equipment, or building, he shall not be entitled to any special depreciation allowance in respect of that plant, machinery, equipment, or building under section fifteen of the Land and Income Tax Amendment Act, 1945.

(4) Without limiting the discretion of the Commissioner under this section, it is hereby declared that the Commissioner may refuse in whole or in part to allow any deduction under this section—

(a) In any case where he is of the opinion that the cost of any item of plant, machinery, or equipment acquired or installed is not of sufficient magnitude to warrant a depreciation allowance under this section:

5 (c) In any case where he is satisfied that any such building has been acquired or erected for the accommodation of the taxpayer or the wife or a child of the taxpayer.

9. (1) Notwithstanding anything to the contrary in section eighty of the principal Act, any taxpayer engaged in any farming or agricultural business on any land in New Zealand shall, in calculating the assessable income derived by him from that business in any income year, be entitled to deduct—

(2) Where any land together with the improvements thereon is sold by the taxpayer within five years from the date of his acquisition of that land and the taxpayer has been allowed as a deduction in calculating his assessable income expenditure in respect of that land which but for this section would not have been allowable as a deduction, the amount by which the selling price of the land and improvements exceeds the aggregate amount consisting of the original purchase price and any expenditure on improvements for which no deduction has been allowed in calculating his assessable income shall be deemed to be assessable income derived by the taxpayer in the year in which the property is sold, to the extent of the total deductions allowed under this section since the acquisition of the land: 25 30 35

Provided that, if the taxpayer so elects, the Commissioner may, notwithstanding anything to the contrary in section sixteen of the principal Act, make a revised assessment or assessments in respect of any year in which a deduction has been allowed under this 40 section without allowing that deduction or without allowing such portion thereof as he thinks fit, and may recover the additional amount of tax accordingly.

5 (3) This section shall apply with respect to the tax for the year of assessment commencing on the first day of April, nineteen hundred and fifty-one, and for every subsequent year.

10 10. (1) Where an association enters into transactions with its members, or with its members and others, any profit or surplus arising from those transactions which would be included in the profits or gains of the association if the transactions were not of a mutual character shall be deemed to be profits or gains arising from those transactions and to be assessable income of the association, except that, in computing the assessable income of the association, the Commissioner shall allow as expenses any sums which—

Profits of mutual associations in respect of transactions with members.

20 (a) Represent a discount, rebate, dividend, or bonus granted or paid by the association to members or other persons in respect of amounts paid or payable by or to them on account of their transactions with the association, being transactions which are taken into account in computing the assessable income; and

25 (b) Are calculated by reference to the said amounts or to the magnitude of the said transactions and not by reference to any share or interest in the capital of the association.

30 (2) Nothing in this section shall affect the extent of the exemption from income tax of any co-operative company to which the provisions of paragraph (ee) of section seventy-eight of the principal Act (as enacted by section six of the Land and Income Tax Amendment Act, 1935) are applicable.

1935, No. 32

35 (3) Where any discount, rebate, dividend, or bonus is granted or paid to any person by an association, it shall form part of the assessable income of that person if the transaction from which it arises is of such a nature that any payment in respect thereof by that person to the association would be allowed as a deduction in computing the assessable income of that person,

40

(4) For the purposes of this section, a discount, rebate, dividend, or bonus shall be deemed to have been granted to or paid to a person when it has been credited in account or otherwise dealt with in his interest or on his behalf. 5

11. (1) Notwithstanding anything to the contrary in the principal Act, where any property devised or bequeathed by will subject to the payment of an annuity has been transferred to a beneficiary, and that property or any property substituted therefor is charged with payment of the annuity or any part thereof, any amount paid in any income year on account of that annuity by the owner of that property or substituted property shall be allowed as a deduction in calculating the income derived by the owner from that property or substituted property in that income year, so far as that income extends: 15 20

Provided that no deduction shall be allowed under this section where the owner for the time being of the property or substituted property (not being a beneficiary) is a person who has acquired the same by purchase subject to the condition that he assumes the liability for payment of the whole or any part of the annuity charged thereon. 25

(2) In this section the term "beneficiary", in relation to any property, means a person to whom that property has been devised or bequeathed by will or a person who is entitled, pursuant to a provision in a will, to purchase, subject to payment of an annuity, that property, being property which forms part of the estate of the testator, and which also forms part of the succession of that person in that estate for the purposes of the Death Duties Act, 1921. 30 35

12. Section eighty-nine of the principal Act is hereby amended by adding the following subsection:—

"(4) This section shall have the same operation in relation to income derived from Western Samoa as it would have had if Western Samoa were part of the British dominions." 40

Assignments
or settlements
of income.

13. (1) Where any person transfers (otherwise than by will) the right to any income to any relative or to any related company for a period that is less than the prescribed period, without transferring the ownership of the property (if any) producing the income, that

5 income shall be deemed to be income derived by the transferor and by no other person as if the transfer had not been made.

(2) Where by the terms of any settlement made by any person (in this section referred to as the settlor) the income of the settled property or of any property substituted therefor is payable to or to be applied or accumulated for the benefit of a relative of the settlor or any related company for a period that is less than the prescribed period and the settlor remains the beneficial owner of the corpus of that property or the settlement provides that that corpus shall revert to the settlor or to the wife or husband of the settlor or that the right to dispose of that corpus shall be reserved to the settlor or to the wife or husband of the settlor, the income from the settled property or from any property substituted therefor shall, so long as the income is derived by a beneficiary who is not entitled to the corpus, be deemed to be income derived by the settlor and by no other person as if the settlement had not been made.

(3) Where any company transfers to any other person for a period that is less than the prescribed period the right to any income derived by the company, without transferring the ownership of the property (if any) producing the income, the income shall be deemed to be income derived by the company and by no other person as if the transfer had not been made.

(4) Where by the terms of any settlement made by any company the income of the settled property or of any property substituted therefor is payable to or to be applied or accumulated for the benefit of any other person for a period that is less than the prescribed period and the company remains the beneficial owner of the corpus of that property or the settlement provides that that corpus shall revert to the company or to any shareholder in the company or to the wife or husband of any shareholder in the company or that the right to dispose of that corpus shall be reserved to the company or to any shareholder in the company or to the wife or husband of any shareholder in the company, the income from the settled property or from any property substituted therefor shall, so long as the income is derived by a beneficiary who is not entitled to the corpus, be deemed to be income derived by the company and by no other person as if the settlement had not been made. 5

(5) Where under any transfer or settlement income is payable to or to be applied or accumulated for the benefit of two or more persons in succession, the transfer or settlement shall be deemed for the purposes of this section to be a separate transfer or settlement in respect of each such person. 10

(6) In this section—

“Income” includes any amount that would, if the right thereto had not been transferred or a settlement in respect thereof had not been made, have been treated as income of the person making the transfer or settlement, as the case may be: 15

“The prescribed period” means— 20

(a) In the case of a transfer to or a settlement in favour of a child of the transferor or settlor (whether or not it is also to or in favour of some other person), either a period which cannot be less than seven years calculated from the date from which income is payable to or to be applied or accumulated for the benefit of the child under the transfer or settlement, or the period calculated from that date which must elapse before the child will attain the age of twenty-one years, whichever period is the longer: 25 30

(b) In the case of a transfer to or a settlement in favour of a related company or a relative other than a child of the transferor or settlor (whether or not it is also to or in favour of some other person), a period which cannot be less than seven years from the date from which income is payable to or to be applied or accumulated for the benefit of the company or relative under the transfer or settlement; 35 40

(c) In the case of a transfer or settlement by a company, a period which cannot be less than seven years from the date from which income is payable to or to be applied or accumulated for the benefit of the transferee or beneficiary, as the case may be, or, where the transferee or beneficiary is a person under the age of twenty-one years at the date of the transfer or settlement, either a period which cannot be less than seven years from the date from which income is payable to him or to be applied or accumulated for his benefit or the period calculated from the last mentioned date which must elapse before the transferee or beneficiary will attain the age of twenty-one years, whichever is the longer:

“ Related company ” means a company which is under the control of the transferor or settlor or any relative or relatives of the transferor or settlor or any one or more of them:

“ Relative ” means a husband or wife, or a relative by blood within the fourth degree of relationship (whether legitimate or illegitimate), or a relative by marriage or adoption:

“ Settlement ” includes any disposition, trust, covenant, agreement, arrangement, or transfer of assets.

(7) This section shall not apply with respect to any transfer or settlement made before the twenty-fourth day of November, nineteen hundred and fifty, nor to any marriage settlement, nor to any transfer or settlement made for fully adequate consideration in money or money's worth, nor to any transfer or settlement under which the income is payable to or to be applied for the benefit of any person during the whole of his life.

14. (1) Where any person belonging to the New Zealand Naval Forces, the New Zealand Army, or the Royal New Zealand Air Force is a member of an emergency force, the pay earned by him as a member of that force shall be assessable for income tax, and income tax and social security charge shall be payable thereon in accordance with the provisions of this section.

Income tax and social security charge payable by members of emergency force.

(2) There shall be payable in respect of the daily pay earned by and accruing each day to a member of an emergency force, and shall be deducted from that daily pay by the paying authority, a composite daily amount comprising—

(a) A daily amount of income tax calculated in accordance with the provisions of this section and on the basis that the income tax payable each day is an amount equal to a three hundred and sixty-fifth part of the income tax which would have been payable if the same rate of pay as the member earned during that day had continued for a period of three hundred and sixty-five days and if the income tax had been calculated on that amount separately from and irrespective of any other income derived by the member; and

(b) A daily amount of social security charge calculated at the rate prescribed for the time being by the Social Security Act, 1938, in respect of salary or wages.

(3) In calculating the daily amount of income tax payable in respect of pay earned by a member of an emergency force—

(a) The income tax shall be calculated as if the member had derived no income other than his pay:

(b) Notwithstanding anything to the contrary in any subsequent annual taxing Act, the rate of income tax applicable shall be the rate fixed by the annual taxing Act last passed before the day in respect of which the daily pay was earned:

(c) The following special exemptions, and no others, shall be allowed as a deduction, namely:—

(i) A special exemption under section seventy-four of the principal Act:

(ii) Where the member is a married man, a special exemption under section four of the Land and Income Tax Amendment Act, 1932-33, computed as if the wife of the member derived no income:

1938, No. 7

1932-33, No. 40

(iii) Where the member is a married woman, a special exemption under section two of the Land and Income Tax Amendment Act, 1933, computed as if the husband of the member derived no income: 1933, No. 43

(iv) Where the member has any dependent relative, a special exemption under section eleven of the Land and Income Tax Amendment Act, 1939: 1939, No. 34

(v) Where the member is a widow or widower or divorced person and has dependent children and employs a housekeeper, a special exemption under section three of the Land and Income Tax Amendment Act, 1933:

(d) The provisions of the principal Act limiting to a specified amount the reduction of tax by reason of any special exemption and section thirteen of the Land and Income Tax Amendment Act, 1939 (which relates to the aggregation of the incomes of husbands and wives), shall not apply with respect to the pay of any member of an emergency force assessed under this section.

(4) Any income derived by a member of an emergency force from any source or sources other than pay received by him as a member of that force shall be separately assessable in the same manner as if he had not derived any pay as a member of an emergency force and had not been allowed any special exemption in calculating the tax payable in respect of that pay.

(5) Any member of an emergency force who satisfies the Commissioner that the deduction of income tax from his pay in any income year in accordance with this section has resulted in a greater amount of income tax being paid than would have been payable if he had not been a member of an emergency force and had been in receipt of salary or wages equal to the amount of his pay may, within two years after the end of that income year, or within such further time as the Commissioner may allow, elect to have income tax on his pay assessed in the same manner as if this section had not been passed, and, in that event, the member so electing shall furnish a return of the income derived by him during the income year in which he received that pay and shall include in that return together with all other income derived by him the pay received by him in that year, and the member shall be assessable and liable for income tax in respect of the total income derived by him in that income year in the same manner and to the same extent as if the foregoing provisions of this section had not been enacted, but shall be entitled to credit against the tax so assessed for any income tax which has been deducted or paid in respect of that income: 5
