

MAORI TRUST BOARDS BILL

EXPLANATORY NOTE

THE purpose of this Bill is to consolidate the law relating to various Maori Trust Boards, most of which have been set up to administer, for the benefit of tribal groups, money paid by the Crown as compensation for land claims. At present the codes governing these Boards are to be found in the various enactments set out in the Schedule to the Bill, and in regulations made under those enactments.

Because the statutory provisions applicable to these Boards have been enacted at different times and under different circumstances, there are numerous differences, of a minor nature, which this Bill proposes to eliminate by setting out a common code of powers and procedure. The majority of clauses reproduce, in substance, the present law.

At the same time the opportunity is taken to propose several new provisions by which control of the administration of the Boards' affairs can be improved.

PART I

Constitution of Maori Trust Boards

In this Part the existing Boards are continued and in most cases renamed. Each clause in this Part relates to a separate Board and contains provisions applicable only to that Board. Except in Clause 3, no new substantive law is proposed in this Part.

Clause 3 (Aorangi Maori Trust Board): At present the money paid in settlement of the Aorangi claim is administered by trustees. This clause constitutes these trustees a Maori Trust Board, and the Board will be a body corporate subject to the general provisions of the Bill.

PART II

General Provisions Relating to Maori Trust Boards

In this Part, general provisions applying to all Maori Trust Boards are proposed in relation to membership, meetings, functions, accounts, and similar matters. The clauses restate the substance of the present law, except as referred to in this note.

Clause 14: At present, the persons elected by beneficiaries of a Board as members are not necessarily appointed. This clause provides that elections will be held in all cases and that persons elected will be appointed. Subclause (3) is completely new and sets out a class of persons ineligible for appointment as members, as in the case of local bodies.

Clause 16 empowers appointments to fill extraordinary vacancies without the necessity of elections. This is to avoid the heavy costs of conducting by-elections to fill casual vacancies.

Clause 18 prescribes a quorum of half the number of members or, if that number is an odd number, half the next highest number. At present the quorums prescribed vary, but they all approximate half the number of members.

Clause 26: At present some Boards require the Minister's consent to buy land and some do not. This clause requires the consent of the Minister in all cases.

Clause 29: The power given by this clause to appoint countersigning officers exists at present in the case of some Boards only. Subclause (4) empowers the Minister, by direction to the countersigning officer, to stop payments out of the Board's fund in the event of any irregularity.

Clause 32: This clause which, in effect, requires Boards to conduct their financial operations each year in accordance with a budget submitted to and approved by the Minister, is a restatement of the law now applying to all Boards.

Clause 33: This clause is new. The Minister is empowered to direct the investigation of the affairs of a Board by some person appointed for the purpose, and, pending the completion of the investigation, to use the powers given by Clause 29 to direct a countersigning officer not to sign cheques. The Minister is also empowered to have any payment to the Board of money from the Public Account deferred pending the completion of an investigation. The person making the investigation is to report to the Minister who may, as he thinks fit, recommend the removal of any member, or require the Board to dismiss any employee, or require the Board to do any act which it can legally do. If the Board does not comply with any requisition, the Minister is empowered to authorize some person to do, in the name of the Board, whatever has to be done, and any such acts will be as effective as if done by the Board.

PART III

Elections

Although in the case of some Boards members are elected by postal ballot (e.g., the Ngaitahu Trust Board) in most cases elections are conducted in an informal manner at meetings. This has not proved satisfactory, and in some cases fresh elections have had to be held. Provision is made in this Part for the preparation of a roll of qualified beneficiaries and for the conduct of elections on the basis of that roll.

Clauses 42 to 45 (Roll of Beneficiaries) are new as regards most Boards. The clauses prescribe in detail the manner in which rolls of beneficiaries are to be prepared.

Clauses 46 to 49 (Nomination of Members) are substantially in accordance with the present law except that minor variations as between Boards have been removed.

Clauses 50 to 53 (Election by Postal Ballot) prescribe the provisions which will apply when elections by postal ballot are held, which will be in all cases excepting those in which special regulations apply. Clause 50 provides for the making of regulations containing special provisions in respect of elections to membership of any particular Board otherwise than by postal ballot. This is to allow for circumstances in which the general provisions contained in this Part prove impracticable or inconvenient.

Clauses 54 and 55, which are similar to provisions in the Local Elections and Polls Act 1953, provide that certain irregularities are not to invalidate elections and that certain other irregularities may be validated by Order in Council.

PART IV

Miscellaneous

Clause 56 empowers the making of regulations for the purposes of the Bill generally, and in particular for fixing the number of members of each Board, providing for the representation of sections or divisions of beneficiaries, and providing in special cases for difference in election procedures. In the case of most Boards, membership is based on different tribal divisions and the detailed presentation of these will require, as at present, to be effected by regulations.
