

SUMMARY PROCEEDINGS AMENDMENT BILL

EXPLANATORY NOTE

THIS Bill amends the Summary Proceedings Act 1957. The principal amendments are as follows:

- (a) Provision is made for a defendant to plead guilty at any time before or during a preliminary hearing. If a defendant pleads guilty under this provision he will be committed to the Supreme Court for sentence without further consideration of the evidence:
- (b) Provision is made for a Magistrate's Court to commit a defendant for trial in the Supreme Court without considering the evidence in certain circumstances, namely, the defendant is represented by a barrister or solicitor, all evidence consists of written statements, and the barrister or solicitor representing the defendant agrees to the Court committing the defendant without considering the evidence:
- (c) Provision is made for written statements to be admitted as evidence at a preliminary hearing on certain conditions. The effect of this provision is that a person who gives evidence that is not challenged by any party to the hearing need not attend the hearing:
- (d) A right of appeal against a sentence imposed by a Magistrate's Court for contempt of Court is given.

Clause 1 relates to the Short Title and commencement of the Bill. The provisions referred to in paragraphs (a) to (c) above and those relating to the summary procedure for minor offences (clause 3) come into force on a date to be appointed by the Governor-General by Order in Council. All other provisions come into force on the day on which the Bill receives the Governor-General's assent.

Clause 2 amends section 19A of the principal Act to provide that in certain circumstances a constable may release on summons a defendant who is charged with a summary offence or an indictable offence that may be dealt with summarily. At present this section only applies where the defendant has been charged with a summary offence.

Clause 3 makes a number of drafting amendments to section 20A of the principal Act (which provides a summary procedure for minor offences).

Clause 4 repeals section 21 of the principal Act (which provides a summary procedure for certain traffic offences). This section has been superseded by section 20A of the principal Act (referred to above).

No. 120—1

Clause 5 amends sections 35 and 156 of the principal Act to provide that accredited news media reporters may not be excluded from a Court. At present these sections provide that accredited newspaper reporters may not be excluded.

Clause 6 substitutes the words “Criminal Records” for the words “Criminal Record Book” in section 71 of the principal Act and other enactments and makes other drafting amendments.

Clause 7 restricts the application of section 80 of the principal Act (which provides that warrants may be addressed to any constable or bailiff) to warrants of commitment issued under Part III of the principal Act and warrants of distress. At present the section applies to all warrants of commitment (whether issued under Part III of the principal Act or otherwise).

Clause 8 makes a drafting amendment.

Clause 9 amends section 91 of the principal Act (which provides for the transfer of enforcement of a fine to another Court) to provide that the enforcement of a fine may be transferred to another Court if it appears to the Registrar of the Court that imposed the fine that it may be more effectively enforced in that other Court. At present the enforcement of a fine can only be transferred to another Court if default has been made in the payment thereof.

Clause 10 makes a drafting amendment.

Clause 11 amends section 100 of the principal Act which, among other things, empowers a Magistrate to remit a fine that has not been paid. This clause extends this section to empower a Magistrate to remit part only of a fine.

Clause 12 inserts a new section 115B in the principal Act which provides a right of appeal to the Supreme Court against a sentence for contempt of Court imposed by a Magistrate’s Court.

Clause 13 amends section 116 of the principal Act (which relates to notice of an appeal) by increasing the time within which a defendant may appeal to the Supreme Court from 10 days to 28 days.

Clause 14 makes a drafting amendment.

Clause 15 inserts a new section 153A in the principal Act which provides that if a defendant is represented by a barrister or solicitor and the offence with which he is charged is not punishable by death he may, at any time before or during the preliminary hearing of an information, request that he be brought before a Magistrate’s Court to plead guilty to the offence with which he is charged; that if he pleads guilty when brought before the Court, the Court shall commit him to the Supreme Court for sentence; and that if he does not plead guilty when brought before the Court, he shall be treated in all respects as if no such request had been made.

Clause 16 inserts a new section 160A in the principal Act which provides that if at any preliminary hearing the defendant is represented by a barrister or solicitor, all evidence is in the form of written statements, and the barrister or solicitor representing the defendant agrees, the Court shall not consider the evidence but shall commit the defendant to the Supreme Court for trial or (if the defendant pleads guilty) for sentence.

Clause 17 inserts a new section 173A in the principal Act which provides that a written statement by any person shall be admissible as evidence at a preliminary hearing on certain conditions. The principal condition is that all other parties to the hearing consent to the admission of the statement. The new section also provides that, except where the defendant is to be committed under section 160A of the principal Act (clause 16), the Court may require any person who has made a written statement to attend before the Court and give evidence.

Clause 18 amends section 203 (2) of the principal Act to provide that any person may be served with a summons and released under section 19A of the principal Act on a Sunday.

Clause 19: Subclauses (1) and (2) amend section 347 of the Crimes Act 1961 (which relates to the power of a Judge to discharge an accused). The effect of the amendments are—

- (a) That a Judge shall not discharge an accused who has been committed for trial unless he has given the prosecutor and the accused reasonable opportunity to be heard on whether the accused should be discharged:
- (b) That either the prosecutor or the accused may apply for a discharge under this section:
- (c) That any direction given by a Judge under this section shall be given in open Court.

Subclause (3) amends section 375 of the Crimes Act 1961 to provide that accredited news media reporters may not be excluded from the Supreme Court. At present this section provides that accredited newspaper reporters may not be excluded.

Clause 20 makes amendments and repeals that are consequential upon clauses 15 to 17 of the Bill.

25 that would amount to perjury if made on oath in a judicial proceeding commits an offence and is liable on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 3 years.”
