

SOCIAL SECURITY AMENDMENT BILL

EXPLANATORY NOTE

THIS Bill amends the Social Security Act 1964.

Clause 1 relates to the Short Title.

PART I

MONETARY BENEFITS

Clause 2 amends section 3 (1) of the principal Act.

Subclause (1) inserts a new definition of the term "application" to make it clear that it includes an application, or a declaration or statement indicating eligibility, for the renewal of benefit.

Subclause (2) is an amendment to the definition of the term "benefit" which is consequential to the amendment made by clause 7 of the Bill.

The term "additional amount for dependent children" is replaced by the term "child supplement".

Clause 3 amends section 12 of the principal Act, which relates to the investigation of claims for benefits.

Subclause (1) empowers the investigation of the circumstances of any person who has been in receipt of a benefit as those circumstances existed immediately before the benefit was granted or during the period that the benefit was paid.

Subclause (2) extends the provision whereby it is the duty of persons to answer questions concerning an applicant for a benefit or concerning any statements contained in an application.

The duty is extended to questions concerning any person who is or has been in receipt of a benefit.

Clause 4: Subclause (1) amends section 15 (1) of the principal Act relating to the criteria for fixing the married couple rate of national superannuation. As at presentworded, section 15 (1) requires the married couple rate to be not less than 80 percent of the average ordinary time weekly wage. The amendment provides for the married couple rate, after deduction of tax at the primary rate, to be not less than 80 percent of the average ordinary time weekly wage after deduction of tax at the married rate. The effect of the change will be that, after tax, married national superannuitants will receive 80 percent of the average ordinary time wage after tax.

Subclause (2) provides for the change to take effect on 28 August 1979.

Clause 5: Subclause (1) amends section 27F (2) of the principal Act which provides for maintenance payments received during the currency of a domestic purposes benefit to be regarded as an instalment of benefit. As at present worded, the subsection applies only to maintenance paid by the father (or mother) of the beneficiary's children. Maintenance can, however, be derived from other sources such as a trust fund set up by the father (or mother) of the children or by the Accident Compensation Commission in cases where the father's (or mother's) death was the result of an accident. The amendment will allow such payments to be regarded in the same way as normal maintenance payments for the purposes of a domestic purposes benefit.

Subclause (2) amends section 27F (3) of the principal Act to allow an officer of the Department to represent a domestic purposes beneficiary in paternity proceedings under the Domestic Proceedings Act 1968.

Clause 6: Subclause (1) amends section 59 (2) of the principal Act to allow a housekeeper's allowance to be paid to a female applicant for unemployment benefit as well as to a male applicant.

Subclause (2) provides for the clause to come into force on 1 October 1979.

Clause 7 rewrites section 61A of the principal Act to change the name of the benefit supplements payable for dependent children. At present these supplements are called additional benefit for a dependent child or children, which has led to the supplements being confused with the additional benefit payable under section 61E or section 61G of the Act. In future the supplements will be referred to as child supplements.

Clause 8 rewrites section 61B of the principal Act to make the same name change as set out in clause 7.

Clause 9 amends section 61E of the principal Act to provide for the additional benefit to be available to national superannuitants on the same basis as income-tested social security beneficiaries.

Clause 10: Subclause (1) repeals subsection (1) of section 77 of the principal Act relating to the entitlement to benefit (including national superannuation) of persons absent from New Zealand, and substitutes new subsections (1) to (1B).

The new subsection (1) precludes payment of any benefit, including national superannuation, for periods of absence from New Zealand, unless the absence does not exceed 13 weeks (extended by a further 2 weeks if the beneficiary's return to New Zealand was delayed owing to circumstances beyond his control).

The new subsection (1A) provides that the Commission may determine, in the circumstances of any particular case, that a sickness, unemployment, or emergency benefit shall not be paid while the beneficiary is absent from New Zealand, notwithstanding that the period of absence is for 13 weeks or less.

The new subsection (1B) requires a beneficiary to notify the Department if he is leaving New Zealand for longer than 13 weeks.

Subclause (2) amends subsection (2) of section 77 of the principal Act which provides that absences from New Zealand, for specified reasons, shall not affect the right to receive a benefit.

The amendment provides that the absence from New Zealand of a blind person for the purposes of guide-dog training shall not affect his right to receive an invalid's benefit.

Subclause (3) preserves the rights of those beneficiaries and super-annuitants who are temporarily absent from New Zealand when this clause comes into effect to have their entitlement to arrears of benefit on their return considered under the existing provisions.

Subclause (4) provides for the clause to take effect from 1 August 1979.

Clause 11 adds a new subsection (6) to section 82 of the principal Act.

The new subsection empowers the advance payment of a benefit if the Social Security Commission is satisfied that an advance payment would best suit the immediate needs of the beneficiary.

Clause 12 repeals section 84A of the principal Act, and substitutes a new section to make it clear that if the Department institutes Court action for maintenance on behalf of a beneficiary, the grant of a benefit shall be prima facie evidence that the beneficiary is unable to support himself or herself to the extent of the amount of benefit payable. The new section 84A also restates the existing provision that the grant of a benefit does not remove any liability of a person to support the beneficiary.

Clause 13 increases the rates of social security benefits for the period 10 January to 24 July 1979.

The rates of widows', invalids', miners', sickness, unemployment, domestic purposes, and related emergency benefits, are increased by $2.40 a week in respect of unmarried persons and by $2 a week each in respect of married persons.

For any person receiving a widow's, invalid's, sickness, unemployment, domestic purposes, or related emergency benefit, the additional amount payable for the first or only dependent child is increased by $1.60 to $29.51 a week.

The rate of orphan's benefit is increased by $1.15 to $24.20 a week.

Clause 14 increases the rates of social security benefits on and after 25 July 1979.

The rates of widows', invalids', miners', sickness, unemployment, domestic purposes, and related emergency benefits, are increased by $3.36 a week in respect of unmarried persons and $2.80 a week each in respect of married persons.

The rates of child supplements for the first child of a solo parent is set at $28.75 a week, and for the second and subsequent children at $4 a week. The child supplement for each child of a married couple is set at $4 a week.

The rate of orphan's benefit is increased by $1.65 to $25.85 a week.

Clause 15: Subclause (1) enacts a new Eighteenth Schedule to the principal Act which provides for a restructured additional benefit scheme under which it will be paid in respect of rent, or outgoings on a home property, in excess of $16 a week or, in the case of beneficiaries paying board, in excess of board payments of $35 a week if single and $58 a week if married. Subject to a means test, the amount of additional benefit payable will be two-thirds of accommodation costs in excess of those figures, up to a maximum of $16 a week.

Subclauses (2) and (3) provide for existing grants of additional benefit to be assessed as if the section had not been enacted, but only until they fall due for annual renewal or are earlier reviewed because of a change in the beneficiary's circumstances. At that time they will be reassessed in accordance with the new Eighteenth Schedule.

Clause 16 provides for married women to qualify for an unemployment benefit on the same basis as married men. As currently worded, the Ninth Schedule provides for the maximum rate of the benefit for a married woman to be half the married couple rate. Under the amendment, a married woman will be able to qualify for the full married couple rate to include payment for a non-qualified husband.

Clause 17 increases the rate of family benefit on and after 17 October 1979 from $3 to $6 a week for each dependent child.

Clause 18 makes an amendment to the Family Benefits (Home Ownership) Act 1964 in respect of the increase in the rate of family benefit on and after 17 October 1979. The effect of the clause is to restrict the amount of family benefit that may be capitalised for housing purposes to the present amount of $3 a week per child, notwithstanding the increase in the rate of family benefit to $6 a week.

PART II

MEDICAL AND HOSPITAL BENEFITS AND OTHER RELATED BENEFITS

Clause 19 amends section 94 of the principal Act to change references to mileage fees to references to travelling fees.

Clause 20 inserts a new section 102A in the principal Act.

The new section requires private hospitals to show on all accounts for treatment the gross amount charged and the amount of the benefit receivable by the hospital.
